

FAFSA Verification FAQ

What is verification?

Verification is the process used to confirm that the information you entered on your FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) application is accurate. If selected for verification, you must successfully complete the verification process by submitting the required documents to your prospective college(s) before you are eligible to receive federal aid.

How do I know if I have been selected for verification?

If you are chosen for verification, you will find detailed instructions in the 'Next Steps' section of your FAFSA Submission Summary. This information becomes available after you've successfully submitted your FAFSA, and it's been processed. Keep an eye on your email and school portal as well, as your school's financial aid office may contact you about the verification process if you are chosen. Stay proactive and check these platforms regularly to avoid missing any essential updates related to the financial aid process.

FAFSA Submission Summary & Student Aid Index (SAI):

The FAFSA Submission Summary offers a summary of all the information entered on the FAFSA, comments about your eligibility for Federal Student Aid, and your SAI. The SAI is the output of a processed FAFSA and is used to determine a student's financial aid eligibility. The SAI is a student's approximate financial resources to contribute toward their education for one school year.
